Go Happy BELLY

REINTRODUCTION FORTNIGHT

Your Reintroduction Tracker

One food at a time. A proper portion, twice in one day. Then three days of eating as you were while you watch what happens.

Write it down even when nothing happens. Nothing is the result you are hoping for, and it is the one people forget to record.

FOOD	DATE TESTED	SAME DAY	NEXT DAY	DAY 3	VERDICT

Verdict, three options and no others: fine / not yet / no

Print as many copies as you need. Turn over for how to run a test.

REINTRODUCTION FORTNIGHT

How To Run A Test

The method

Pick one food. Eat a proper portion of it, twice in one day. Not a taste, and not all day long.

Then eat as you were for three days while you watch what happens. Do not test anything else in that window.

Record something in every row, including the days nothing happens at all.

What counts as a reaction

Bloating, wind, a change in your bowels, reflux, skin, headache, joint aches, mood, sleep, or energy that drops off a cliff. Your pattern will have its own tell, and you will know it by now.

Reactions are often slow. Something that looks fine on the day can show up on day two.

Pace

Three days between foods as a rule. Your pattern page may tell you to go slower, and the Reactive pattern is asked for four, because it reacts late more often than the others.

Do not run a test during a brutal week. You will read the week as the food.

The three verdicts

Fine. Nothing happened. The food goes back into your range.

Not yet. Something happened, but mildly, or you are not certain. Park the food and test it again in a couple of months. This is the most common result and it is not a failure.

No. A clear reaction you would not want to repeat. Leave it out and bring it to your call.

If you are not sure

Treat it as not yet and move on. An uncertain result you record honestly is worth more than a confident one you talked yourself into.

When to stop

If everything you test causes a reaction, stop testing and book your call. That means the work needs more time, not that your list is now permanent.

> A completed tracker is the most useful thing you can put in front of Alina, because it is real evidence about your body rather than a description of how you think things have been going.